VIEWPOINT

Laughter is the medicine of heaven

We, like many of her people, were involved in child care during the recent Easter holiday when we looked after our youngest granddaughter. We had a lot of fun and a great many laughs, not least from her selection of joke tricks, including me discovering a spider in an ice cube floating in my glass of water and the well-known nail through the finger! She thought it very funny, as we did, and her laughter was infectious. I've no doubt you've had similar experiences.

Laughter is good for you. Research shows it releases endorphins, the body's natural feel-good chemicals, and amongst other things, laughter can help relieve stress and so helps your mental health. Laughter can boost the immune system, helping with blood circulation and therefore it is good for your heart. It can also be good for strengthening relationships. But the research is only affirming what we read in the Bible where in Proverbs 17 verse 22 it says: "A cheerful heart is good medicine". Perhaps a more literal translation might be: laughter is like medicine. Some ask: did Jesus have a sense of humour and of course the answer is yes, for didn't he speak about "a camel going through the eye of a needle", which is a pretty comical idea. Even the thought would make you smile. Indeed, I imagine Jesus often smiling.

Humour is a God given-gift and I hope, like me, you feel better for a good laugh. If you keep reading you'll find a joke at the end. But our laughter or humour must never be at the expense of someone else or be demeaning, which if you've ever been on the receiving end, can be hurtful.

So let's be thankful for those who make us laugh and to God for the gift of laughter, and as promised, here is a joke: A man walked into church and approached the minister. "I need help. I think I'm addicted to Twitter." The minister looked at him and said gently, "I'm so sorry, I don't follow you". So what can you do to brighten up someone's day and get them laughing? It's good medicine with great side effects.

The “flower girl” of Dedham Church

Flowers have always been an integral part of the church's ceremonies and rites of passage. Helen Sims, who became head of Dedham Church's flower arrangement team 15 months ago, brings psychological insights as well as the florist's art to this task.

After working as a primary school teacher she returned to the University of Surrey to do a master's degree in environmental psychology. There she devised a brutal experiment to discover whether office plants really do reduce stress levels. Her victims had to solve difficult problems while intrusive music blared out. Those in rooms decked with plants did significantly better than the others.

How is this relevant to the church? “Flowers show that a church is thriving and cared for,” she says. “There is also a spiritual connection. For me it is a form of worship - seeing flowers as examples of creation and beauty.”

The group's widely famed displays also have direct symbolism, for example the Easter flower display, which will last for several weeks, has a dominant white theme based on Arum lilies. For Remembrance Sunday, the tableau included fallen poppies in a wheat field against a black background and photographs of some of Dedham's war dead.

Even so, Helen gives the 22 volunteers in her team a free hand to “express their own creativity”. An arranger may take one to two hours to prepare a “pedestal” display and Helen will only step in if asked. The volunteers are all women, aged from 35 upwards, “but men would be welcome”, Helen adds.

It is a formidable operation. The volunteers work in five groups, some specialising, for example on altar displays, while Helen marshals forces of 10 to 15 for the main festivals. Weddings are co-ordinated by Wendy Sarton who is supported by members of the group. The whole group meets three times a year to share ideas.

Flower arrangers can claim expenses from a special church fund towards the cost of each project, but some provide their own flowers. Helen, who runs her own floristry business from her house in Monk's Lane, helps by obtaining flowers at wholesale prices.

DEDHAM PEOPLE

(Continued) Helen's unlikely journey from teaching and management consultancy to floristry has nevertheless had a certain inevitability. At five she removed flowers from her mother's garden and tried unsuccessfully to sell them. First inspired by her parents' garden, she has always been surrounded by plants and in 2010 she embarked on her floristry training which included a career course with the designer Michael Pooley.

On the terrace above her garden in the valley that falls down to Black Brook, she pointed to two small trees. "My children are Lauren, 13 and Olivia, 9. That's a bay (Laurus nobilis) and that's an olive." Now she has found a job that seemed all along to be her destiny: "I am so lucky to have work that I love," she says. "I was always meant to be a flower girl".

IN MEMORIAM

John MacArthur

John, who died on 25 February, aged 82, moved with his wife Anita (who died in November 2014) to Mill House in Dedham, from Kent, in 1984.

The house hosted grown-up children, grandchildren, other family members and friends, especially on New Year's Eve. John commuted to London for almost three decades, where he worked in corporate finance.

They settled very well in Dedham, truly loving the village and its people, and the surrounding areas. They were loyal customers of local businesses and Anita re-established ties from school days in Ipswich. John and Anita campaigned to keep a GP practice in Dedham and they helped to save Mill Meadow from development. They spent many years using their boats on the river, especially when grandchildren visited. They both loved and worked hard in their garden at Mill House.

John and Anita attended Mass at Ardleigh but they cared about all historic churches and for many years took part in a cycle ride in aid of The Historic Churches Fund.

The family would like to thank all who sent cards and letters, who were friends and neighbours, who cared for or visited them in recent years, who attended their funerals, or if they were customers of yours. You all contributed to their happiness!

HISTORIC DEDHAM

The Great House Fire

Great House, a late medieval timber-framed building which had been re-fronted with white Suffolk bricks in the mid eighteenth century, burned to the ground in the early hours of 1 December 1936 on the same night as the Crystal Palace fire. The glow in the sky over South London and the flames in the village could both be seen from the top of Shoebridge's Hill.

The fire, which was caused by an electrical fault, claimed no victims. The four occupants, Mr and Mrs J. R. Loe and their two Austrian maids, who were roused by the barking of their pet spaniel, climbed out on to the porch and were rescued by neighbours with ladders. A Dedham shopkeeper, Mr E. C. Ray, up early to meet the 6am mail van, was one of the first to raise the alarm. By the time the fire brigade was called at 6.15am, the high wind which was fanning the flames had turned the house into an inferno. Two of the fireman had a narrow escape when part of the roof crashed down only moments after they had jumped clear. Jets of water from hydrants were directed on to the blazing mass until the sodden, smouldering wreckage cast a pall of smoke across the village.

Little House to the east, which shared a party wall, was extensively damaged but was not beyond repair. Great House had been completely gutted. The brick façade was still standing after the fire had been put out but it was in such a precarious state that it had to be demolished immediately.

Westgate House and Great House, High Street, 1 Dec 1936

The burnt-out site was bought by Spencer and Elsie Jackson and their son-in-law, the architect Raymond Erith who lived at Dalebrook House and designed the present house in 1937.

DEDHAM PARISH COUNCIL

CROWN STREET PARKING RESTRICTIONS

Residents on the east side of the village responded superbly at very short notice to our further questionnaire about our recent parking proposals. This survey was required by Colchester Borough Council as a condition for moving to the next stage of the process. There was a good response rate, with 88 per cent in favour, enough to secure approval from the borough council, which will undertake the statutory consultation later this year.

In response to concerns about a possible increase in traffic speeds down Castle Hill, we have submitted an application to Essex County Council for a new vehicle-activated sign on the approach to Coopers Lane.

The proposals, intended to reduce congestion in Crown Street, involve parking restrictions: around the bend approaching Coopers Lane, on the greensward area, around the junctions with Southfields, Forge Street and Parsons Field and into Manningtree Road.

We continue to investigate possible sites for additional parking and if anyone knows of or owns land that might be suitable, please contact me.

PARISH ASSEMBLY, OPEN SESSION

Each year parish councils are required to hold two special meetings. One is the annual meeting, when the Chair and other representatives are elected for the next year. The second is the annual parish assembly, which is an opportunity for the Chair to present the council's annual report. This year both meetings will be held on Monday 8 May.

The annual meeting, at 6pm in the Assembly Rooms, will be followed at 7.45pm by the assembly. As well as the annual report, we will have an informal session, with refreshments, to enable village organisations and residents to raise any issues of concern. We will also be updating residents with proposals for a ditch mapping project with Essex County Council. We are seeking volunteers to help with aspects of this project.

Patient choice: fact or fiction?

The Government says NHS patients have the right to choose hospitals and doctors, but what does that really mean?

Everyone has the right to be registered at a GP practice of their choice. But this right is limited: the government says that a practice may refuse to accept patients if it is full up or if a patient does not live in its catchment area. For residents of Dedham, for example, the real choice is between registering with the Ardleigh or the East Bergholt surgeries. An optional scheme was introduced several years ago for practices to take on patients who did not live in their area. This was aimed at those who, say, lived in Ardleigh, but worked in Chelmsford and wanted to register with a GP near their work. However this proved to be unpopular with practices and less than 5 per cent of practices nationally joined this scheme, mainly due to a lack of clarity about home visiting.

Patients also have the right to express a preference to see a certain doctor within the practice and the practice must try to facilitate this, where possible.

Every patient also has the right to choose a pharmacy to use for obtaining prescription drugs. This sounds straightforward, but it isn't. Official regulations say that GP surgeries in designated areas may dispense, but only to patients who live more than a mile away from a pharmacy. This means that most people in Dedham must use the pharmacy in the village (or another town) but may not collect from the Ardleigh Surgery's dispensary, even if they are registered there.

Choosing a hospital. Government guidance (29 April 2016) says patients have the legal right (with some limitations) to choose which hospital they are referred to and which consultancy team they would like to see. However, this right is restricted by the contracts that the North East Essex Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG) has in place. For example, all orthopaedic referrals have to be sent to a triaging service first and cannot be booked outside this; and all suspected cancer referrals have to go to either Ipswich or Colchester hospitals. With some exceptions, patients may also ask for a change of hospital if they are not treated within a specified time.

Wherever possible the practice will try and comply with patients' wishes, but if you are not offered the choice that you think you are entitled to, you may complain to the CCG ☎918 731.

Lost idyll of a leisured class

Munnings and The River, the current exhibition at Castle House, Dedham, is an exuberant collection of more than 40 of Munnings's dreamy oil and water-colour paintings of rivers.

The first painting that one sees is The Path to the Orchard, a sun-filled scene with sky blue reflections shining on the River Waveney. It sets the scene for this celebration of Munnings's love of rivers, especially the Stour.

Alfred Munnings and his wife Violet reputedly bought Castle House (now the Munnings Museum) to be near the Stour, which they regarded as their playground - canoeing, picnicking and riding horses on its banks.

Set against the dark walls of the gallery's new colour scheme, the Stour paintings shine out. The interesting series, The Pink Parasol, is enhanced by a well preserved actual parasol on display. The artist's poems, and letters between him and John Masefield, the one-time Poet Laureate, can also be seen.

My favourite paintings are Stour at Night 1935 and Floods Near Nayland which capture the watery qualities of a riverscape. They are more subtle than his slighter paintings, which shy away from the originality of his contemporaries. By famously hating modernism, Munnings narrowed his field of vision and cut himself off from artistic experiments, which might have made his paintings of picnics and race horses a little more daring. As he was painting The Path to the Orchard in 1909 (with its harsh reds of unlikely riverbank flowers) much of the artistic world was abandoning the heavily draped world of the Pre Raphaelites.

But Munnings continued with his careful, sentimental paintings of the idyll of an English leisured class. For example, Taggs Island, a greasy painting with its empty bottles of champagne, was exhibited in 1919 (fragment above), when the devastations of the Great War and the flu epidemic were all around him. Still, artists are not obliged to reflect their times. If Munnings was artistically unadventurous, his paintings still have power to charm and, as one of my students said, "evoke a time that has gone". Now in another era, it is a rare treat to be in the artist's fine house looking at paintings of scenes nearby that one can still visit and enjoy. Jenny Hand, the museum's director, encourages visitors to share their own Stour stories – as I did on a postcard. And, in the sunny spirit of Munnings, she wants to know: has anyone been proposed to on the river?

Philippa Black

Skippers ahoy!

The launching of Dedham's electric passenger boats is a welcome sight for the dozen volunteer scrapers, painters and maintenance engineers who have been working on them in a Langham barn through the winter.

Kathleen boat

The two boats, Trusty II and Kathleen, are part of a small fleet owned and operated by the River Stour Trust, a charity established 44 years ago to preserve and improve access to the non-tidal part of the river. Four other craft operate further upstream between Sudbury and Great Henny. The Dedham boats, one at Le Talbooth, above the lock and one below at the Boathouse quay, can each take eight passengers. Jax Horswill organises the rota of 25 volunteer skippers, who include retired professional seamen and engineers. She says the trust is always looking for more volunteers (men and women) to train as skippers or for other tasks which have included designing bridges, maintaining and repairing locks and looking after river banks.

The Dedham boats cruising down to Flatford Mill and up to Stratford St Mary are in great demand during the season from Easter to October. The trip to Flatford takes about 30 minutes at a stately 3½ mph and trips run regularly from 11am to 5pm.

Revenue from the trips (£5 per person one way and £1 for a dog) and from private hire helps the charity meet the cost of maintaining the river and its locks. The trust hopes to finish repairs to the lock at Stratford St Mary by the end of this year. If the Dedham lock could also be repaired, as the trust hopes, the Stour would once again be navigable from the tidal barrier at Cattawade to Langham. In the 18th century, barges took their cargoes all the way up to Sudbury. But now the two Dedham-based boats are separated by the defunct lock at the Mill and there is no nearby landing stage. ✉jax.horswill@gmail.com

New Head for the Marlborough

Scott Lamont, who is negotiating with Punch Taverns to take over the running of Dedham's Marlborough Head Inn, is hoping to return to the more traditional home cooking that he remembers when he worked there as a teenager.

The pub has been serving food and drink to Dedham for more than 300 years. It was once a clothier's house, built in the 14th century, when its cellars held vats of dye, rather than beer. In recent years it has suffered a decline in its evening restaurant clientele as it concentrated on the summer tourist trade. As a result, staff have been cut from around 17 to five, even though the pub catered for 200,000 people last year.

The famous half-timbered building attracts a steady stream of overnight guests. Mr Lamont said that most improvements will have to wait until negotiations are completed, probably by the end of May.

CLUBS & SOCIETIES

CLUB IN FOCUS: Dedham Tennis Club

Dedham Tennis Club's season is now in full swing, with a busy agenda of special events and regular fixtures. The courts, set in the heart of the beautiful village green, are open to players of all abilities and ages who would like to become members.

The club's junior section actively joins with local schools such as Dedham, Lawford, Highfields and Ardleigh to promote the game. There are regular junior coaching sessions at the club on Wednesday afternoons and Saturday mornings. The club's holiday camps and its junior team are going from strength to strength. For details: ✉toby@dedhamtennis.org.uk.

For adults, there are three social tennis club sessions a week (Tuesday mornings, Wednesday evenings and Sunday afternoon - the last with tea and cake). Six Dedham teams are entered in the Colchester and District League, and participation in many other inter-club events is supported. The club arranges regular fun tournaments such as the forthcoming Indian League Format event, the singles challenge ladder and the club championships.

The club also has a great social scene with some regular annual events such as the quiz night, an annual cricket match, a golf day and a ladies open. Among the special events, this summer there will be a Scandi themed Summer Food Festival. The club will also be launching a podcast series later in the year.

Membership starts from £20 per year up to £170 for full family membership. Non-members can book a court for occasional use (£8 per hour) online

WHAT'S ON: FILMS

Wednesday 17 May 2017

La La Land

Directed by Damien Chazelle 2016
(Parental Guidance)

Mia, an aspiring actress, serves lattes to movie stars in between auditions and Sebastian, a jazz musician, scrapes by playing cocktail party gigs in dingy bars, but as success mounts they face decisions that fray the fragile fabric of their love affair, and the dreams they worked to maintain threaten to rip them apart.

Wednesday 21 June 2017

Lion

Directed by Garth Davis 2017
(Parental Guidance)

A five-year-old Indian boy gets lost on the streets of Calcutta, thousands of kilometres from home. He survives many challenges before being adopted by a couple in Australia; 25 years later, he sets out to find his lost family.
